For minors, information about the legal representative may be automatically generated and added.
4. The Company does not collect sensitive personal information that may infringe on users' basic human rights (such as race, ideology, creed, political orientation, criminal records, medical information, etc.).
5. The collected personal information will not be used for purposes other than the collection purpose. If there is a change in the purpose of collection and use, the Company will obtain separate prior consent from the user.
6. The Company may collect users' personal information through the following methods:
 - Homepage, mobile devices, written forms, fax, phone, consultation bulletin boards, email, event applications, delivery requests
 - Collection through generated information collection tools

Article 2 (Purpose of Using Collected Personal Information)

The Company uses the information collected from users for the following purposes:

- To utilize personal information for member registration, smooth customer consultation, providing services promised to users, identity verification related to service provision, purchasing and billing, providing service usage history, and registering payment methods.
- To utilize personal information for confirming membership intention, verifying age and obtaining consent from legal representatives, confirming the identity of users and legal representatives, identifying users, confirming the intention to withdraw from membership, and handling inquiries or complaints.
- To utilize personal information for measures to restrict the use of users who violate laws and company policies (including terms of service), preventing and sanctioning acts that hinder the smooth operation of the service and unauthorized actions, preventing account theft and fraudulent transactions, delivering notices, and preserving records for dispute resolution to protect users and ensure a stable operating environment for the services.
- To utilize personal information for providing services based on demographic characteristics, analyzing access frequency, improving functions, analyzing service usage statistics, reflecting users' tendencies and interests regarding paid service purchases (payments) and service usage based on analysis and statistics, and providing new services.
- To utilize personal information for the purposes of event information, promotional information, and other events and promotions (with consent for marketing and advertising information provision).

Article 3 (Retention and Use Period of Personal Information)

The Company generally retains users' personal information until they withdraw their membership. However, for the purpose of preventing disputes related to transactions, the Company retains the information for the specified periods even after membership withdrawal in the following cases:

1. Reasons for retention of personal information according to the company's internal policies:
 - Records of malicious use (Malicious use refers to transactions that violate the policies established by the Company (including terms), transactions that infringe upon the rights or interests of the Company, members, or third parties, and transactions similar to '1 and 2').
 - Retention reason: Management and measures against malicious use
 - Retention period: 1 year
2. If investigations or inquiries regarding violations of relevant laws are underway against the user: Until the conclusion of the investigation or inquiry.
3. If there are outstanding claims or debts between the Company and the user: Until the settlement of the claims or debts.

4. If retention is necessary under the provisions of relevant laws such as the Commercial Act and the "Act on Consumer Protection in Electronic Commerce," the Company will retain users' information for a certain period as specified by relevant laws.

In this case, the Company will use the retained information only for the purpose of retention, and the retention periods are as follows:

- Retention of records related to consumer complaints or disputes: Retention reason: Consumer Protection in Electronic Commerce Act
 - Retention period: 3 years
- Retention of records related to contracts or withdrawal of offers: Retention reason: Consumer Protection in Electronic Commerce Act

- Retention of logs related to service usage and access: Retention reason: Communications Privacy Protection Act
 - Retention period: 3 months

Article 4 (User's Rights and Obligations)

1. Users can exercise the following rights:
 1. Users may request access, correction, deletion, and suspension of processing of their personal information from the company at any time, and can withdraw their consent to the use of personal information through the member withdrawal process. In this case, the company will verify whether the person making the request is the user or a legitimate representative.
 2. Rights under section 1 can be exercised against the company through written requests, emails, faxes, etc., and the company will take action without delay. However, name, resident registration number, and foreigner registration number cannot be corrected, while changes due to name changes and administrative issues related to resident (business) registration numbers may be allowed as exceptions.
 3. The company may refuse to suspend the processing of personal information even if a request is made if any of the following conditions apply:
 - If there is a specific provision in law or if it is unavoidable to comply with legal obligations.
 - If there is a concern that it may harm the life or body of another person or unlawfully infringe upon the property or other interests of another person.
 - If it is difficult to perform a contract with the data subject, such as when the service agreed upon with the data subject cannot be provided without processing personal information, and the data subject has not clearly expressed their intention to terminate the contract.

4. The rights under section 1 may be exercised through a legal representative or an authorized person designated by the user. In this case, a power of attorney in the format prescribed by the Enforcement Rules of the Personal Information Protection Act (attached Form No. 11) must be submitted.
 5. The request for access and suspension of processing of personal information may be limited by relevant laws.
 6. Requests for correction and deletion of personal information cannot be made if that personal information is explicitly specified as a target for collection under other laws. Furthermore, in cases where a request for correction of personal information errors is made, personal information will not be used or provided until the correction is completed unless otherwise requested under other laws. If incorrect personal information has already been provided, the company will notify third parties of the correction processing results to ensure that corrections are made.
 7. To protect the personal information of children, the company obtains consent from legal representatives for children under the age of 14 during membership registration. Legal representatives may view or modify the child's personal information at any time under this provision and may request termination of service subscription.
2. Users can exercise their rights regarding access, correction, withdrawal of consent, exercise of the right to refuse consent, and withdrawal as follows:
 1. Scope of access and correction of personal information:
 - Personal information held by the company.
 - Personal information used by the company or provided to third parties.
 - Status of consent for collection, use, and provision of personal information.
 2. Methods for exercising the right to access, correct personal information, withdraw consent, and refuse consent for sending advertising information:
 - Users may contact the company's customer center (koodsinc@gmail.com) on the platform to exercise their right to refuse consent.
 3. Membership withdrawal:
 - Users may withdraw their membership according to the procedure set by the company on the platform.
 3. Users have an obligation to protect their personal information as follows:

1. Users must keep their personal information up to date, and they are responsible for any issues arising from inaccurate information entered by them.
2. The company is not responsible for issues arising from the leakage of personal information due to the user's negligence, such as the transfer, rental, or loss of email, password, access media, or hacking using methods or technologies that cannot be blocked by legal security measures, even though the company has exercised reasonable care.
3. Users must ensure that their personal information, such as email, password, and access media, is not leaked and must not transfer or lend it to third parties. The company is not responsible for any damages arising from the user's negligence.
4. If a user registers or uses a service using someone else's personal information, they will lose their user qualification and may be punished according to relevant laws.
5. Users are obligated to cooperate with the company's requests, such as regularly changing passwords for security in accordance with the company's personal information protection policy.
6. Users must comply with this policy and related laws regarding personal information.

Article 5 (Provision of Personal Information to Third Parties)

1. The company, in principle, does not provide or publicly disclose users' personal information beyond the scope of collection and use purposes. However, if it is necessary to share users' personal information with partners for better service provision, the company will notify the users of the recipient, the purpose of provision, the items of information provided, and the duration of use and retention, and seek their consent. Additionally, personal information may be provided when required by law or in accordance with procedures established by law for investigation purposes upon request from investigative authorities.
2. The company will not use users' personal information for purposes other than those for which the company provides services, nor will it provide such information to third parties without users' consent. If it is necessary to provide information to third parties, the company will inform the users and obtain separate consent. However, the following cases are exceptions:
 1. If a user violates the company's terms of use or engages in illegal activities that cause harm to others or violate public morals while using the service, and it is determined that it is necessary to disclose personal information to take legal action.
 2. If required by law or upon request from investigative authorities in accordance with procedures established by law for investigation purposes.

3. In cases of statistical compilation, academic research, market research, information provision, and sending notice emails in a form that does not identify specific individuals.
4. If the user has previously consented.

Article 6 (Entrustment of Personal Information Processing)

1. The company may entrust part of the related tasks to external parties to provide smooth services and enhance service quality. When entrusting personal information processing tasks to external parties, the company will stipulate compliance with personal information protection laws, confidentiality regarding personal information, prohibition of provision to third parties, liability in case of incidents, duration of the entrustment, and obligations to destroy personal information after processing in contracts, and will manage and supervise compliance with these regulations to ensure the protection of users' personal information.
2. The company entrusts the processing of personal information as follows for service enhancement and effective business operations:
 - Entrusted Company: KG Inicis Co., Ltd.
 - Contents of Entrusted Tasks: Payment and related tasks
 - Retention and Use Period of Personal Information: Upon membership withdrawal or termination of the entrustment contract.
3. If there is any change in the content of the personal information processing entrusted tasks or the entrusted parties, the company will promptly disclose this through the personal information processing policy, which will be regarded as consent to the entrustment.

Article 7 (Destruction Procedures and Methods of Personal Information)

1. The company, in principle, will destroy users' personal information without delay once the purposes of collection and use are achieved.
2. The procedures and methods for the destruction of personal information by the company are as follows:
 - Destruction Procedure: Information entered by users for membership registration, etc., will be moved to a separate database (for paper, to a separate document storage) after the purpose is achieved, and will be stored for a certain period in accordance with internal policies and other relevant laws (refer to retention and use period) before being destroyed. This personal information will not be used for purposes other than those for which it is retained and preserved, unless required by law.
 - Destruction Method: Personal information recorded and stored on paper will be destroyed by shredding or incineration, while personal information stored in electronic file formats will be deleted using technical methods that make it impossible to restore the records.

Article 8 (Installation, Operation, and Refusal of Automatic Personal Information Collection Devices)

1. The company operates devices such as cookies that store users' information and retrieve it as needed to provide smooth service. A cookie is a very small text file sent by the server that operates the website to the member's browser, which can be stored on the user's computer hard disk.
2. The company uses cookies for purposes such as analyzing users' access frequency and visit time, understanding users' preferences and areas of interest, tracking their footprints, determining participation levels in various events, and providing targeted marketing and personalized services (purpose of cookie usage).
3. Users have the right to choose regarding the installation of cookies. Therefore, users can set their web browser options to accept all cookies, confirm each time a cookie is saved, or refuse to save all cookies (installation, operation, and refusal of cookies). However, if users refuse to install cookies, they may have difficulties using certain services that require login.
4. To refuse cookie settings as per Section 3, users can choose their web browser options to allow all cookies, confirm each time a cookie is saved, or refuse to save all cookies.
5. To provide an internet environment similar to that of a PC, the company may also use cookies on mobile devices (e.g., smartphones, tablet PCs). The company collects cookies in accordance with relevant laws and guidelines from regulatory agencies, but does not collect cookies that can identify individuals, including users' personal information, without prior consent.
6. Users can also choose whether to allow cookies in the web browser settings on mobile devices. Depending on the operating system and type of web browser of the mobile device, this may vary somewhat, but in most cases, users can decide whether to allow cookies or delete all existing cookies through the settings of the mobile web browser. However, refusing to save cookies may cause inconvenience when using certain services that require login.

Article 9 (Company's Efforts for Personal Information Protection)

1. The company is taking the following technical and administrative measures to ensure the safety of users' personal information during processing, so that personal information is not lost, stolen, leaked, altered, or damaged:
 - a. Personal Information Encryption: The company encrypts users' personal information, such as passwords and payment methods, in accordance with the standards required by law. Currently, it is using devices to block intrusions from outside and prevent attacks and hacking. In particular, the servers storing users' personal information are maintained separately and are not directly connected to external internet lines to ensure security.
 - b. Measures Against Hacking: The company is making every effort to prevent the leakage or damage of members' personal information due to hacking or computer viruses. It employs the latest antivirus programs to prevent users' personal information or data from being leaked or damaged and ensures that personal information can be securely transmitted over the network through encrypted communication. Additionally, the company strives to implement all possible technical measures to ensure security systemically. c. Minimization of Processing Staff and Training: The company minimizes the number of employees handling personal information, limiting it to the personnel responsible for personal information management, and emphasizes compliance with the personal information processing policy through ongoing training for the designated staff.

2. Notwithstanding the provisions of Paragraph 1, the company assumes no responsibility for any issues that arise due to the user's own intentional or negligent actions, or problems on the internet that result in the leakage or exposure of personal information such as email and passwords.

Article 10 (Personal Information Protection Officer and Contact Information)

The company has designated a Personal Information Protection Officer as follows to collect opinions and handle complaints regarding personal information. Users can report all inquiries, complaint handling, and damage relief related to personal information protection that occur while using the company's services to the Personal Information Protection Officer or the relevant department. The company will respond to and process users' inquiries and reports promptly.
